Scouts Royally Entertained at Mayfield-- Ceremonies Public

Seventeen members of Menlo Park Troop No. 107, left yesterday afternoon under the leadership of Scoutmaster L. E. Harris, to attend the big camp at Mayfield, and will be gone until this evening. This is the first camp of this kind that the boys have been privileged to take part in and it goes without saying that they will learn many things that will be of advantage to them.

They formed at their headquarters at 3:30 and marched to the south end of town where they embarked in machines and were taken to Mayfield.

Before leaving the headquarters an inspection was held and a silver medal and a flash light awarded to the two neatest scouts. L. H. Cook of the Safety Electric Works gave the flash light.

The boys presented a fine appearance as they marched down the highway with their flags flying and each wearing a new neckerchief of sky blue held in place with a white turks head. The neckerchiefs were secured through the courtesy of Mrs. Worrell, who sent to San Francisco of them specially for this camp.

The Menlo Scouts were well received as they marched down Main street in Mayfield to the grammar school where the camp is located. The troop formed in line at Stanford avenue and Main street and proceeded to camp in column of fours.

Committees composed of members of Scouts have been busy for weeks with the arrangements for the various events and have developed a program which will be very interesting to the public as well as instructive for the Scouts themselves.

Following is the list of competitive events that will go to make up the program:

1. Best all around troop present. Prize to be awarded to troop winning largest number of points. (Total of troop, team and individual winnings.)
2. Best all around individual. Prize to boy winning largest number of points.
3. Prize to best team (2 or more boys.)
4. Events to be judged upon.

A—TROOP

1. Neatest row of tents.
2. Per cent of Troop present.
3. Neatness at inspection.
4. Quietness at night.
5. Neatness and dispatch at morning breakfast.
6. Appearance and alignment in parade.
7. Company or troop drill.

B—TEAM

1. Signaling.
2. Pyramid.
3. Skin the Snake.
4. Antelope.

C—INDIVIDUALS

1. Neatness.
2. Fire by Friction.
3. Dressing Race.
4. Bugling.
5. Drill Down.

The judges of these events will be taken from among the various Scout Executives and Scoutmasters present and each event will be strongly contested for.

Scoutmaster E. M. Knight of Mayfield troop, who is acting as general in chief of the camp has arranged a very interesting program for the two days during which the boys will be in the city and deserves much credit for the fine schedule he has prepared.

The program follows:

FRIDAY AFTERNOON

4. Fire by friction.

Awarding of Prizes.

10. 3:30 p. m. Break camp.

The finance committee which is composed of ten members of the troop under Assistant Scoutmaster L. E. Harris, has worked hard and faithfully at the herculean task of gathering the funds for this big event and the boys, with no assistance from their leaders have collected a fine sum of money with which to put this big event over and have succeeded beyond their fondest hopes. Money is still coming in and there is now no need to worry over the financial end of the camp.

A number of beautiful prizes have been purchased for the various individual and team events as well as for the troop securing the largest number of points in competition. The prizes consist of two silver cups, five gold medals, a scout knife, an electric flash light and twenty-four bar pins.

The big feed to be held Friday night is in charge of the officers and members of Mayfield Lodge No. 22, I. O. O. F., and has been prepared with great care. The members of the lodge have made all of the arrangements for this momentous occasion and will personally serve the Scouts when mess call blows. Mayfield lodge of Odd Fellows has adopted the local troop and since they have taken it over the boys have made wonderful progress. The lodge members deserve the thanks of the entire community for their fine work and the help they have given the boys.

The Scouts are looking forward to a good time and will without a doubt give a good account of themselves.

The camp site is being laid out by a committee of boys and will present an attractive appearance when the tent city springs up during the afternoon. In addition to the "pup" tents there will be a headquarters tent where visitors may obtain any information desired in regard to the camp, scouts or program and a first aid hospital.

The camp will be strictly military in its lay out to facilitate the handling of such a large number of boys.

The public is welcome to visit the camp and the presence of parents, relatives and friends of the boys is earnestly solicited.

The boy scout work is one of the most needed aids to the proper training boys at this time and it is hoped that every boy may become interested in it. There is a big need also for scout leaders and assistants to aid in this great work and the public should support the movement to the limit. There is only one way this support can be given intelligently and that is to understand it. This is the reason every one who possibly can should avail themselves of the opportunity to see the Scouts in action.

Harrison E. White, Boy Scout Benito counties said in a public address, "Under our present citizenship and fairness in personal relationships."

Operetta Pleases Local Audience

Thursday evening one of the most successful affairs ever held here took place at the school auditorium when the orchestra of the Mayfield School put on "The Pioneer's Papoose," for the benefit of the Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. Jas. T. O'Keefe, Mrs. A. W. Gale and Mrs. J. J. Garland, the committee in charge are certainly to be complimented upon securing this fine operetta for presentation in Menlo Park.

Prof. W. S. Bower spoke briefly and sketched a background for the story to be presented in the play. In conclusion he welcomed the Mayfielders to the Menlo Park "wigwam" and told them how glad they were to have their neighbors visit them. He presented the peace pipe to Prof. E. M. Knight, leader of the orchestra and principal of the Mayfield school. Mr. Knight accepted it with thanks and spoke of the fine spirit displayed between schools today, "saying that when he was a boy rival teams were stoned if they dared venture near another school." He told of how the orchestra had only been in existence for about a year and asked the audience to consider this fact in the presentation of the music. The apology was very unnecessary, however, as was shown by the masterful way in which the operetta was presented. It would have been a credit to persons much older.

Through the operetta is told the story of a massacre in the early days and the vengeance wreaked on the fiendish Tribe of Arrowheads by the Tomahawks, assisted by the Pioneer and his daughter, Waltzie, with their rifles and ammunition and of the happy ending and solving of a mystery by the Pioneer, when he finds that the "Prince Whiteface" is his son, whom he thought had been murdered by the Arrowheads. Chief Tomahawk who had reared the little white boy as his son reluctantly relinquishes him to his own people.

Those deserving special mention for the way in which they took their parts were Louis Micelli as "Layem-out" the medicine man and the star performer of the group. "Just as Old or as Young as You Feel," a solo and chorus of girls was particularly good and received hearty encores. "When You are Young" by Layem-out and Lillimush, the leading lady was also very clever and beautiful as was the solo, "The Forest Mirror" by Lillimush. All in all the performance was very creditable and Prof. Knight and assistants deserve great credit for the splendid manner in which it was presented.

During the brief intermission, Mrs. James T. O'Keefe, retiring president of the P. T. A. took occasion to thank Mr. Knight and the Mayfield actors and orchestra for their willingness to entertain the Menlo Park people. Mrs. O'Keefe voiced the hope that the local school would be able to have an orchestra next year and said that "it was one of her fondest dreams for the school and that she hoped that the orchestra would be able to play for graduation next year." This met with hearty applause so we may hear from the local school in a musical way soon. She read a message from the Sequoia Union High School inviting the public to view the exhibits on display at the school yesterday evening from 7:30 to 10:30.

Following the program members of the cast and the orchestra were entertained by the Association and refreshments served.

Mrs. M. Carter and daughter, Miss Loava, are home from a delightful vacation spent in Yosemite Valley. Benito counties recently said in a public address, "Under our present civilization, there are certain things that the home, the school and the church alike let go untaught. It is for teaching those things that scouting exists."

He also stated, "There is no difficulty in finding scouts, our chief difficulty is in finding scoutmasters. Men can do a real service to the boys of the community in teaching them citizenship and fairness in personal relationships."

Study Club Ends Year With Picnic

Monday about twenty-members and friends of the Menlo Park Study Club motored to Schenkel's Park for their first annual picnic and although the day was rather gloomy out-of-doors there was enough sunshine and happiness within to off-set the weather condition. Mr. Schenkel, the genial host made everything as pleasant as possible by giving the ladies exclusive use of the big hall, where the luncheon was served at one long table, and such a lunch. Nothing more could have been desired and the committee deserves praise for the efficient manner in which it was prepared and served.

The chief business of the day was hearing reports from Mrs. Jay T. Cooper, Mrs. W. S. Bower and Miss Stella E. Ely from the recent convention held in Santa Cruz. The reports were most enjoyable, each telling of the things that impressed her most.

Three new members were received as follows: Mrs. J. J. Garland, Mrs. W. Wilkinson and Mrs. A. Sieller. Three new applications were also presented and will be acted upon at the next meeting.

Authorities of the Veteran's Hospital requested that the club furnish pies instead of cakes for the party to be held on July 27. A number of members volunteered the necessary money and provisions to supply them. A letter was received from the Red Cross director thanking the Club for the pies furnished last week.

Two surprises were sprung. Miss Stella Ely presented a token from the Club to Mrs. E. Gardner, the only retiring officer this year and Mrs. Gardner presented a beautiful picture to Mrs. Jay T. Cooper, the president from the Club members. On the back of the picture was the autograph of each member. In a few words Mrs. Cooper expressed her thanks and assured the members that anything which she had been able to do was prompted by love.

As a part of the day's fun stunts were performed by each member and many of them deserve special mention for their originality, among them being those by Mesdames Aable, Snover, Gardner, Kurtz and Garland.

IMPROVEMENT CLUB TO HOLD DANCE TONIGHT

Everything is in readiness for the big dance of the Menlo Park Improvement Club to be held this evening in Duff and Doyle hall here. Excellent music will be provided and a good time is assured to all who attend. Members were all supplied with two tickets by the secretary this week with the request to buy one and sell the other if possible as the club needs funds badly to carry on its important work.

NEW STANFORD THEATRE TO BE OPENED TUESDAY WITH FINE PROGRAM

Arrangements have been completed for the formal opening of the New Stanford Theatre in Palo Alto on Tuesday evening, according to Al W. Gillis, the manager, who announces that everything is in readiness for the wonderful event.

The new theatre is the most up-to-date play house on the Peninsula outside of San Francisco and nothing has been omitted which would add to its attractions. The wonderful new Leathurby-Smith Orchestra organ will be presided over by Elmer Vincent and will be a delight to local theatre-goers.

The feature picture for opening show will be Reginald Denny in "I'll Show You the Town," and is the very best picture Denny has ever made. Allen White's Collegians will also appear in person, broadcasting symphony, jazz and harmony. Popular prices will prevail at all performances. Matinees will be held every afternoon, which no doubt will become very popular.

Blair Oram, scribe of the Menlo Park Troop, Boy Scouts, was seriously injured yesterday when he was kicked in the face by a horse which he was cleaning. He is in the hospital at the present time.

Noted Speakers at Light Meet

The American housewife; the farmer, the nation's business, finance and science will all have their voice in the five day deliberations of the National Electric Light Association's interest in the convention in San Francisco from June 15th to 19th.

The representatives of the housewives will be Mrs. John D. Sherman of Washington, D. C., president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who will be one of a number of outstanding women in attendance at the convention. Mrs. Sherman will speak on "What Electricity is Doing for Women."

As an evidence of the administration's interest in the convention two of President Coolidge's cabinet members will be in attendance and appear on the program—Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine. Hoover will speak on "Business," appearing as the principal speaker at the big evening program designed to interest the general public as well as members of the National Electric Light Association. Secretary Jardine, together with L. J. Tabor, master of the National Grange, Columbus, Ohio, will speak from the standpoint of farmer and what the application of power means to the rural welfare of America.

B. C. Forbes, editor and financial authority, will discuss, "The Customer Owner" and will give one of the important financial messages of the meeting.

It is an interesting commentary on modern business that the entire second section of the public relations section of the convention is in the hands of women delegates. The subjects of this section to be handled by the women include "Public Information," "Speaking to the Public," and "The Better Half of Industry."

DANCING SCHOOL HERE MEETING WITH SUCCESS

Mrs. Pearl Ragan is very gratified by the splendid response received in the number of pupils already enrolled in her dancing classes. To date twenty-one pupils have enrolled for class instruction. Private lessons are given by appointment only.

Classes for children are held each Saturday from 1 to 6 o'clock in Duff and Doyle hall here and the children will be taught thoroughly in any different kind of dancing which the parent may prefer. Special rates are being offered for the summer course which should prove attractive to many. Classes for adults are held on Friday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Call Mrs. Ragan at Phone Palo Alto 1940-J-5 for further information or see her at the hall on Tuesday or Friday evening.

LAS LOMITAS HONORS MISS BERNADETTE CLARK

At the final meeting of the year yesterday afternoon members of the Las Lomitas Parent-Teacher Association honored the retiring president, Miss Bernadette Clark, who has served in that office for two years, by presenting her with a beautiful fountain pen in appreciation of her faithful work for the Association.

Mrs. Charles Gray of Los Altos was present and addressed the members briefly before installing the newly elected officers. Mrs. J. Feliz is the new president.

Following the business session, tea was served and a pleasant social hour spent.

MENLO PARK SCOUTS GO ON FIRST CAMPING TRIP

Last Saturday morning the local troop of Boy Scouts met at their headquarters at 9:30 and proceeded to their first camp on the property of the Bear Gulch Water Company under the direction of Scoutmaster L. E. Harris assisted by F. N. Harris of San Jose.

Despite the rain the boys had the time of their lives and learned much about scouting.

Humorous Column to be New Feature

Through the courtesy of Thomas J. Glynn, a local resident and writer of note, the Menlo Park Recorder is enabled to offer a series of humorous sketches and other interesting bits each week for the amusement of local readers. Mr. Glynn is an able writer and his jokes and stories are used by many of the leading magazines, but as these are not credited to the author but used promiscuously his name is not so well known as writers of serious works. In addition to the "Adventures in Non-sense" which he writes he also from time to time, writes poems of a serious nature many of which have been accepted by leading literary magazines.

Mr. Glynn has resided in Menlo Park for the past fourteen years and so is well known to many of the Recorder's readers.

"The Padlock Foames, Defective," series will be commenced next week and the publishers feel sure that they will become popular as the weeks roll by. The first chapter will be entitled, "The Mystery of the Missing Links." Watch for it next week in the Recorder.

MRS. W. SHELBORNE IS HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

A number of friends of Mrs. W. Shellbourne headed by Mrs. F. J. Worrell surprised her at her home here yesterday afternoon in honor of her birthday anniversary. Armfuls of beautiful flowers attested of their love for Mrs. Shellbourne, who is an invalid and not able to enjoy their beauty in the out-of-doors. Many beautiful gifts were also presented to Mrs. Shellbourne by her friends.

One of the pleasant surprises of the afternoon was a telephone call from Mrs. Howard Sanborn of Los Angeles, Mrs. Shellbourne's sister, conveying her greetings and a shower of post cards from many others who could not be present personally.

Those present included: Mesdames Walter Stephens, A. Richter, Charles Taylor, J. James, Olin Nuckles, Carrie Riley, A. Decampo, L. Lightbody, William Moore and F. J. Worrell. Mrs. James T. O'Keefe and Mrs. A. W. Gale called during the afternoon.

To say that Mrs. Shellbourne was made happy would be putting it mildly. It seemed heaven on earth to her to have so many dear friends remember her in this thoughtful way. Refreshments were served and Mrs. Moore entertained with several songs.

"PIONEER'S PAPOOSE" PRESENTED AT SEQUOIA TONIGHT

Again the operetta, "The Pioneer's Papoose," is to be presented at the Sequoia Union High School in Redwood City this evening when the public will again see the re-appearance of Otis M. Carrington's play, based upon an actual incident told him by his father. "The Pioneer's Papoose" was last presented in 1919, when Stephen Kreiss, Romano Antich, Kendall Towne and Jane Kreiss played the leading roles.

Mr. Carrington has changed the story slightly, but the theme, which explains the deliberate shooting down of an Indian, is the same. The cast is to be made up of members of Mr. Carrington's singing classes with Desiree Heydenfeldt taking the lead, supported by Robert McKee, Gilbert Findley and Robert Poole and a chorus of forty-seven boys and girls.

Mr. Carrington has stated that a great deal of action, unusual settings, good lighting effects, tense dramatic moments will make the play an interesting one.

SUCCESSFUL CARD PARTY HELD BY IMP. CLUB WOMEN

Wednesday afternoon a committee of women members of the Menlo Park Improvement Association held a delightful card party in the Club Rooms which was largely attended and netted a neat sum for the Club's treasury.

Prizes were awarded to the following: First—Mrs. A. Seiler; Second, Mrs. O. B. Dewey; consolation, Mrs. H. B. Dewey and door prize to Mrs. Buckout.

Adventures in Non-sense

By THOMAS J. GLYNN

INTRODUCTION!

Come, wander down these printed lines,
Where foolishness is blithely spread,
And let these quips and nonsense bits
Go gamboling though your worthy head.

Each week before your scanning eyes
We'll venture into nonsense land,
Devoid of gloom, where laughs may bloom,
Awaiting only your command.

Now, do not say: "It has no sense."
For we admit that it has not,
Why probe the chaff if you should laugh,
And prove that gloom can be forgot.

Indefinite Definitions

OIL—Bad stuff to get mixed in.
FORD—a rattling good car.

CLOCK—Originator of "the strike."
HOT DOG—Feverish canine with bones extracted.

MOTHER-IN-LAW—A common objection to marriage.

SLOT MACHINE—A legitimate swindle.

HAMMOCK—A swinging "spoon" holder.

BANANA—A canary colored slip-on.

HOBBO—A gentleman of leisure; the only person, not wealthy who can go North in summer, and South in winter.

CONGRESSMAN—A rag, a bone and a tank of air.

Lives of misers, oft remind us
There's no sense to stint our taste,
And departing, leave behind us
Coin for someone else to waste.

"Jones drank furniture polish to get a fine finish."

"Did he get it?"

"Yes, it was the most impressive funeral in years."

Oh, ho for the life of a collector,
His work is done before he even starts to do it.

"I don't care to keep that school girl's complexion," said the married man as he brushed off his coat.

The others came if it was fair,
But he came with the rain, so
She knew that he must really care
And called him her "dear rain beau."

"Let this be a lesson to you," said the judge as he sentenced the man to death.

Slim lady: "Do you like the knickerbocker fad?"

Stout lady: "I can't seem to get into it."

RAVENSWOOD C. OF C. TO PICNIC AT KENDALL DELL

Plans for the annual community picnic of the Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce were made at the meeting held Monday evening in the Ravenswood School Auditorium. It is to be held at Kendall Dell on Saturday, June 20th.

The action of the Chamber in regard to discontinuing the discussion of incorporation was approved as it was thought that sentiment in favor of the movement was not strong at this time.

The transportation committee reported that steps were being taken to secure a bus to operate from the Ravenswood district to the Southern Pacific Station in Palo Alto.

Progress was also reported by the committee urging the construction of a new bridge across San Francisco creek at University avenue. It is believed that at a meeting to be held in the near future with San Mateo county officials a definite proposal will be made.

AGAINST MALARIA

Strong Sense of Duty Made Sailor "Missing"

"Man overboard!" stories are usually grousing. Here is one told by Captain Willis, R. M., that affords a pleasant change. The warning was sounded and the ship stopped. Boats were lowered but though a long search was made there was nothing found. The question then arose: Who was the man? Many had seen him disappear, but no one could identify him. The captain was not at all pleased. It seemed that the lowering of the flaps had not been properly supervised, and the officer in charge of quarter-deck was "getting socks."

"And all I can tell you," said the captain in conclusion, "is that the blood of that unfortunate man will rest on your head."

Meantime, the order "Hands muster by open list," was piped, and the crew fell in by divisions. But the mystery only deepened, for no one was missing.

At last, up the ladder appeared a scared-looking A. B., and addressing the officer of the watch, he said:

"I think, sir, as 'ow the man overboard must 'ave been me. I went over with the flap, sir, but 'eld onto the securing chain, and climbed in again very soon, sir."

"But why didn't you say so?"

"Very sorry, sir, but, being in the lifeboat's crew, I had to go away to search for the man overboard."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Trainmen Earn Their Money in Madagascar

Tamatave, principal seaport of Madagascar, is connected with the capital, Antananarivo—or Tananarive, as the French call it—by a narrow-gauge railway, the trains departing three times a week. E. Alexander Powell writes in the Century Magazine.

It takes the mail train 16 hours to traverse these 225 miles, this being due in some measure to the steepness of the grade, for the capital is nearly a mile above sea level; but even more, I imagine, to the delays incurred in announcing the names of the stations.

How, I ask you, can a train make good running time if it has to wait for the conductor to enunciate such names as Ampantotamainza, Andavakim-menarana, Ankaramamadiraka, Ambohgrandriananitra? Were the employees of American lines required thus to overwork their vocal cords the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen would make a protest to the Interstate commerce commission.

Freak Fruit Tree

In the Transvaal a remarkable tree has been grown as an experiment.

A lemon tree was topped until only three branches remained. Upon one was grafted an orange, upon another a grapefruit, while the third was allowed to remain lemon, with the result that at this time of the year the tree is bearing oranges, grapefruit and a few lemons all at once!

In the early season oranges and lemon fruit are in possession. Later oranges and grapefruit hold sway, while at the end of summer the tree has specimens of each adorning its boughs, combined with the dark and paler green leaves belonging to the different fruits.

Reinhart, the Painter

Joachim Christian Reinhart, German etcher and painter, was born at Hof, in Bavaria in 1761 and studied under Oeser at Leipzig and under Klingel at Dresden, in Saxony. In 1789 he went to Rome, where he became a follower of the classicist German painters, Carstens and Koch. He devoted himself more particularly to landscape painting and to engraving. Examples of his landscapes are to be found at most German galleries, notably at Frankfurt, Munich, Leipzig and Gotha.

India's Plague of Rats

A former Indian official says that rats are one of the greatest curses of India. There are hundreds of millions of them, and they cannot be exterminated because of religious beliefs. The Hindu will harry the rat, but will not kill him; the Mohammedan, who does not object to killing, knows that without help he can do nothing. And so the evil continues. It is no exaggeration to say that, if the number of rats could be kept down to a reasonable figure, the wealth of India would be increased a fifth.—Youth's Companion.

Solomon's Wise Rule

Under the reign of Solomon Israel developed into a commercial nation. Foreign alliances which he made formed the basis of trading relations abroad. He joined in maritime commerce with the Phoenicians, and once in three years sent a fleet from his port at the head of the gulf of Akaba to trade with Olib, presumably on the eastern coast of Arabia, and places on the way. These expeditions brought back gold and oriental riches and vastly expanded the royal coffers.

Washing Machines Popular

In the olden days the family laundry was done at the stony edge of a babbling brook.

Later, hardware stores brought the brook to the home through sales of pipe and pumps, and furnished a washboard and tub to do the laundry with.

In the last two years, we learn from Good Hardware, American homes have been supplied with over $150,000,000 worth of electric washing machines. The hardware store was the third greatest distributor of these machines.

Does "Marriage by Mail" Work?

Girl Who Tried to Take Short Cut to Love Relates Thrilling Experience

WHY writes the lonely letters certain publications print? Who answers them? Do they offer a way out for the lonesome hall-room girl or the friendless man in a strange city?

A girl who frankly admits that she answered the printed letter of a "lonely" man with a view to getting a husband, tells in May Smart Set of her disillusionment. It may be that hers is an exceptional case. Certainly an exchange of references would have saved her from bitter experience. If, as some social workers say, the "Lonesome Columns" of periodicals are to be used more and more as a means of match-making between worthy young men and women, it is wise to guard this new social adventure by tales of actual experiences, such as this girl tells.

"I decided to meet my unknown lover in Baltimore as he desired. I followed my instructions and gave his address to a taxi driver. I was at the apartment house in a minute or two; then at his door. It swung open as I touched the electric bell. My dream-man stood before me.

"He gave a cry of delight, grabbed my bag, and closed the door behind me.

"Here was my lover, heavy of build, with small keen eyes, a fat neck, and puffy cheeks. My dreams of refinement, of the ideal lover, vanished. I became frightened and hysterical. He was looking on me like a great hungry animal. My vague fears were warranted. I wanted to turn and run. Then he began speaking in that pleasant voice which had intrigued me. My fears subsided but a desperate panic-stricken desire to escape possessed me.

"After the dinner he abruptly took me in his arms and crushed me to him. The words he poured into my ears were not those of a man who truly loved a woman.

"You were to be my soul mate, my affinity. You came into my life, into my arms, as my dream woman. You must stay here with me."

"Just when the silence became so nerve-racking that I expected nothing but the worst, the telephone rang. I heard him pick up the receiver. He answered:

"Hello . . . No, oh, no! Wrong number. No such woman here by that name." He quickly hung up.

"There was the reason for my sulking. The only person in whom I confided my plans back home was calling me at the time she promised. This agreement was made in a half-joking way; she was simply curious to know if my dreams had come true. However, I used it very forcefully. For the first time, I asserted myself!

"Do you know who that was? That was a friend of mine who will either talk to me or know the reason why. Now I have only ten minutes to call her in order to prevent an investigation. What shall I do?"

"You've proved to me what you are—a man hunting for women; using love letters to lonely girls to lure them to this apartment; taking no responsibility; putting the blame on them by their very presence here. You started your bragging too soon!"

"I made him put my bag and cloak out into the hall, then go back into the room and call a taxi for me. And he did it."

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR THE TOURING MOTORIST

The wise motorist, by taking an inventory of his car's condition before starting on an extended trip can eliminate many of the mechanical troubles which frequently mar the vacation tour, according to Louis P. Signer, manager of the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Here are a few hints gleaned from the experience of the trouble shooters who "doctor" disabled cars for Automobile Association members when they encounter trouble on the road. If these "ten commandments" are carefully obeyed before starting on a tour, they will eliminate many of the bumps on the highway of motorist.

1—Clean and flush the radiator and cooling system.

2—Inspect the ignition system to make sure that the contact points are properly spaced and check the wiring system for breaks in insulation or short circuits.

3—Have the battery properly tested and recharged if necessary.

4—Drain all oil from the crankcase and clean the entire lubricating system with flushing oil rather than kerosene.

5—Have the brakes inspected to insure equalization and retine if needed; also see that the clutch does not ride the floor board.

6—Clean and oil the brake rods and connections as well as shackle bolts for better braking power.

7—Clean and oil the springs to eliminate squeaks. Graphite or a special preparation is better than oil between the leaves.

8—Take out creens in the oil and gasoline lines and clean thoroughly.

9—Have the carburetor properly adjusted, spark plugs cleaned, and have grease cups and universal joint filled.

10—Take the wheels off and repack the bearings with lubricant.

ROBERT LEWIS CHOSEN AS STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

Robert Lewis was chosen as head of the Associated Student Body of Stanford University at the election held Wednesday by the slight margin of 11 votes. The election was a re-vote from the Qual election of last week in which neither candidate received a clear majority of the votes cast.

Precautions were taken to have the voting fair in all ways. The ballots were marked in ink, according to the new regulations and the counting place was roped off to prevent outsiders from getting near the ballots. A total vote of 1,291 was cast, thirty of which were thrown out on account of irregular marking.

NOW IT'S THE NEIGHBORHOOD GAS DEALER AND GARAGE

There has been a lot of agitation in recent months on the subject of "Patronize Your Neighborhood Store." Dealers of all sorts in various parts of the city have banded together with the idea of bringing trade to their own doors that would otherwise go down town to the bigger establishments.

There is a lot to be said for the neighborhood dealer. He forms the backbone of business. Too often he is used merely for the emergency—the extra cake of yeast, the loaf of bread, the spool of thread—while the orders that mean profit to him go to the big store.

And now the neighborhood gasoline dealer and garage man is coming into his own. The General Petroleum Corporation, in the merchandising of their products throughout the coast territory, have determined that they will deal only through independent dealers and through the garages. They will build no stations of their own.

This means that the motorist who wants General Gasoline must patronize an independent dealer. He must help a local business man on his road to success.

It is estimated that there are in California today eight independent gasoline pumps to every one that is owned by a company. Most of the manufacturers deal both through their own stations and the independent as well. The General is the only one of the larger organizations which deals entirely through independents.

Miss Stella Ely spent the week end with relatives at the Pinnacles National Park in San Benito County.

RADIO CHATS WITH Powel Crosley Jr.

HERE can be but one point of view in the consideration of radio regulation and development. That is to assure increasing service to the listener.

So declared Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce recently. No truer words have been expressed about radio.

What does this mean? It means the enriching of the American home. It means a further removal of the lines of demarcation between urban and rural home life. It is taking to the farm home some of the things which compensate the city dweller for living in crowded areas.

No small problem faces the Department of Commerce. There are today 663 broadcasting stations either in operation or under construction.

Of these 455 are Class A, or 500 watts power or less. One hundred eight are Class B, or more than 500 watts.

Class A stations have a radius of good practical reception of not more than 25 or 30 miles.

Class B stations, of course, have a much wider radius.

MR. HOOVER has said that the recent policy of the Department of allowing the increase in power to 5,000 watts will mean that the radius of serviceable reception will be greatly increased and the reception itself within the present radius will become very much more reliable.

This is, as Mr. Hoover has pointed out, of particular importance to those living on farms, especially in the summer and during the day.

The working out of these problems will take time. The Government is doing the best that it can and that has been very well. In the meantime the listener must be patient because after all it must be remembered that radio will prosper just so long as radio serves him and serves him well.

GUARD OFFICERS PREPARING FOR RECORD CROWD AT CAMP

Sacramento.—Adjutant-General Mittelstaedt is making preparations to care for 5,000 troops at the summer encampments of the guard. Estimates of the attendance at the various camps follow:

Del Monte—July 4 to 18, 3,500 troops, representing all infantry units, signal corps and tank company.

Camp Lewis—July 4 to 18, 500 troops of 143rd field artillery.

Fort Barry, San Francisco, August 1 to 15, 700 troops of the 250th coast artillery.

Fort MacArthur, San Pedro, August 8 to 22, 300 troops of the 251st coast artillery.

Griffith Park, Los Angeles, July 4 to 18, 125 troops of the 115th observation squadron of the 40th air service division.

Battery B of the 250th coast artillery, San Francisco, has been awarded the badge of excellency for general efficiency and target practice during 1924. It was the only California organization so honored by the government.

Two members of the state civil service commission were deprived of their positions as the result of an error by the governor in signing bill A. B. 613, which originally provided for dispensing with the positions of Cecilia Chamberlin of Greenville and John Galvin of Richmond, state civil service commissioners, but was amended by the legislature to avoid this. Sent to the governor for his signature, however, the bill failed to contain the amendments and was signed. Attorney General Webb expressed the opinion the act became a law when it received the gubernatorial signature and that there is nothing that can be done about it.

A campaign to enforce the semi-monthly pay day law is announced by State Labor Commissioner Mathewson. Governor Richardson recently signed a bill that provides an additional civil penalty of $10 for each failure to pay each employee semi-monthly, as provided in the act, such penalty to be collected through civil action by the labor commissioner. No agreements between workers and the employer to pay less frequently than the law requires will be recognized by the bureau.

Thomas Laundry, a resident of this state for fifty years and of San Diego for the past forty, died there at the age of 100 years and 6 months and was buried in a casket fashioned by his own hands, which was placed in an underground vault prepared by him at the age of 97. Laundry was born in England in 1824 and was a resident of San Francisco during most of the first ten years in the state.

The governor has signed the oleomargarine bill, which imposes a 2-cent state tax in addition to the federal. The governor, asserting that the bill was needed to protect the people from impositions, added that thousands of petitioners had asked that the bill become a law. He also signed the Redwood highway bill, providing for a connection with the Oregon Roosevelt highway.

Eph Weiss, Santa Rosa optometrist, has established scholarships at the University of California and the Stanford university for students in physics, chemistry and philosophy through presentation to the two institutions of a Berkeley property valued at $25,000 upon which a $60,000 apartment house is to be erected to provide the income.

Dr. Edith Bronson, 38, associate professor of pediatrics at the University of California hospital, was drowned when she fell into the Merced river, near Yosemite, while walking in her sleep. Forest rangers discovered the body a mile and a half below camp. Dr. Bronson had been attending the California state medical convention.

In 1862, Reflection lake, near Redding, was stocked with catfish by Dr. Stockton. This is the only species to be found there at present. Recently a request for permission to dynamite the fish and restock the waters with trout was made of the state fish and game commission.

Sierra valley residents, past and present, will hold their annual reunion and basket picnic in McKinley park, Sacramento, July 14. These gatherings have been held for several years and have never failed to draw a large attendance.

Lower Lake, Lake county, has postponed the seventh annual rodeo, scheduled for June 13 and 14, until the 20th, when a 2-day carnival will begin, featured by some of the best attractions of the kind.

Fellow members of the Gridley American Legion post have given assistance to J. T. Robertson, fruit grower, who was severely burned in a fire which destroyed his home. They have thinned out his orchard and are looking after his interests until he recovers.

The federal forest fire air patrol will make its base at Mather field, Sacramento, during the coming summer. Three planes will be stationed there, with a force of about twelve men. The patrol will start its work of spotting and reporting forest fires July 1.

After ten years as postmaster of Colma, W. J. Mowry is to retire.

Colusa's quota for the July citizens' training camp at Del Monte is full.

Federal agents are active in cleaning up narcotic nests in Tehama county.

The annual convention of the California state church federation met at San Francisco May 26.

Santa Cruz chamber of commerce put over a whirlwind drive for $18,000 to bring the chamber's budget quota up to the required $40,000.

St. Helena's Fourth of July celebration, July 4 and 5, promises to excel anything given in Napa valley in past years.

George P. Cortner of Redlands was elected president of the Southern California Baptist, succeeding F. O. Beldan of Bakersfield.

Under a new school program the Fresno state college will furnish Kings county with student instructors for six schools next fall.

Four hours' solicitation were all required to oversubscribe the $1,195 quota of eastern Merced county in the American Legion endowment campaign.

Licenses of fifty California motorists were canceled during May. Twenty-two of these were for speeding and seventeen for driving while intoxicated.

The California state division of the International Association for Identification elected Walter Macey of San Diego president at their Santa Ana convention.

The California rodeo, Salinas' fourteenth annual wild west celebration, will be held July 22. A new grandstand, with a seating capacity of 10,000, is being built.

Driving down from the Devil's den country, the worst dust storm of years swept over most of Kern county, May 26, while the thermometer hovered around the 90 mark.

Jack Kemp, Los Angeles racing driver, died at the San Jose emergency hospital from injuries received when his automobile overturned during the tryout of Sunday afternoon races.

One hundred members, mostly adults, were received into the Broadway Methodist church of Chico at a reception following the close of a month's revival conducted by the pastor.

The new home of the San Francisco Elks was opened May 27 at 456 Post street. The structure ranks with the best clubs in the country in its appointments and conveniences and cost $1,500,000.

County treasurers of California completed their semi-annual settlements with the state May 23, paying in approximately $3,000,000 in inheritance tax funds and other revenues in which the state shares.

California will co-operate in the Nevada Transcontinental Highway exposition at Reno next year. Governor Richardson signed assembly bill 789, appropriating $100,000 for a California building to house this state's exhibits.

Papers of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state for the Pacific Southwest Bakeries corporation, capitalized at $1,000,000, which, according to reports, is to operate a plant to be established in Los Angeles.

As a result of the death of two school children on athletic fields during shot putting contests, the state supervisor of physical education has instructed authorities to have responsible persons in charge of fields where the javelin, the shot or the discus is used in competition.

Dr. W. T. McArthur of Los Angeles was elected president of the California Medical association at the closing session of the society's convention at Yosemite. Oakland was chosen as 1926 convention city. The vice-president-elect is Dr. Joseph Catton of San Francisco. The chancellors elected were Dr. William H. Kiger, Los Angeles, and Dr. R. A. Peers of Colfax.

H. H. Wilson of San Francisco was drowned in the Klamath river near Yreka. Two companions with whom he was fishing raced for four miles along the river's banks in an effort to reach a spot where they could rescue him. While his companions were traveling four miles by auto over a direct route, the current had carried him a distance of six miles. The dead body was caught at a bend in the river.

Of the 215 cities in the United States which maintain community chests, twenty-four are in California, more than are maintained by any other state. The California cities which now have community chests in operation are: Berkeley, Colton, Fresno, Glendale, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Oakland, Ontario, Pasadena, Pomona, Richmond, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Francisco, San Gabriel, San Jose, Santa Ana, Santa Barbara, South San Francisco, Stockton, Ventura, Victorville.

Suit for $1,000,000 damages has been filed against the Napa state hospital and the state of California by Meyer Kraft, a bookbinder of San Francisco, for alleged false commitment to that institution on two occasions.

Callstoga's Rotary club "charter baby" is dead. ALL WORN OUT?

Are you lame and stiff, tired, nervous and depressed; miserable with backache? Have you suspected your kidneys? Good health depends upon good elimination. But sluggish kidneys allow impurities to accumulate and upset the whole system. Backache is apt to follow; stabbing pains, depressing headaches, dizziness, and other annoying kidney irregularities. Why experiment? If your kidneys are sluggish, why not use Doan's Pills. Doan's is a harmless stimulant diuretic. Used the world over. Ask your neighbor!

A California Case

W. A. Jones, 1049 E. Hill St., Long Beach, Calif., says: "My kidneys were disordered and I was obliged to get up many times during the night to pass the secretions. There was a bearing-down pain through my back and when I stooped, sharp, quick pains shot across my kidneys. Doan's Pills rid me of the trouble."

BOY SCOUT CAMP AND WHAT IT MEANS

This week end witnesses one of the greatest Scout events ever held on the Peninsula when the Mayfield Troop is acting as host to some five hundred boys from Santa Clara and San Benito counties. Boys from San Mateo county although in another district were also invited to participate in the camp activities, but will not be eligible to prizes. Menlo Park Troop under the supervision of Scoutmaster L. E. Harris is enjoying the camp and as the Troop was but recently formed, they will be able to pick up much valuable information from the other Scouts.

The Scoutmaster and his assistants have worked hard to help the boys and to make better men of them and they deserve the hearty support of those who have boys in the troop and those who reside in the city for this work.

The big work which the Boy Scout organization is engaged in can best be summed up in the following little poem written by Will S. Adkin:

Just Try to be the Fellow Your Mother Thinks You Are

While walking down a crowded street the other day,
I heard a little urchin to a comrade turn and say:
"Say, Jimmie, let me tell you, I'd be happy as a clam
If I only was the fellow that my mother thinks I am.

"She thinks I am a wonder, and knows her little lad
Would never mix with anything that's ugly, mean or bad;
And lots of times I sit and think how nice 'twould be—Gee Whizz!

If a fellow was the fellow that his mother thinks he is."

So, folks, be yours a life of toil or undiluted joy,
You still can learn a lesson from the small, unlettered boy;
Don't try to be an earthly saint, with eyes fixed on a star—
Just try to be the fellow that your mother thinks you are.

There will without a doubt be much enthusiasm aroused among the boys of the community after this camp and many of them will want to become Boy Scouts and there is no reason why they should not be if their elders give them the support and encouragement that is necessary. Remember that the boy of today is the man of tomorrow.

The present Scout Troop is not full but there is no reason why one or two more could not be organized, if some organization will get behind them and find men who will take the leadership of them. The biggest need in the country today is for men who are big enough to see the needs of the boys and who will devote their time to help make them the men that they should be. A boy is naturally full of life, be a boy with him, guide him and at the same time hold his respect and esteem.

It takes big men to help the boys along, men who will give their time freely for this purpose. We have men of this kind, of they can only be put to work. Let us find them and assist them, both financially and morally, and we will find the rising generation will reward us by being better, bigger and broader men.

MENLO PARK AND INCORPORATION

Now that the time for hearing of Menlo Park's incorporation petition has been set for Monday, June 15th, local citizens are banding together to represent the same and show the supervisors in no unmistakable terms that Menlo Park wishes to rise out of the village class and become a city of the sixth class with a full corps of officers to make and enforce her own laws.

Menlo Park has enjoyed a substantial growth during the past few years and many local citizens are now anxious to see her take her place along with other progressive towns of the county. Many laws are needed to benefit the community and regulate undesirable elements who drift here from towns where strict regulations are enforced.

It will be well to commence thinking about men or women to fill the respective city offices. Any qualified voter may run for any office by obtaining a few signatures on his petition. If conditions are to be made better and more desirable, it is important that only persons of the highest personal character be elected or appointed to office in the new town. In this way many existing conditions which have caused annoyance in the past can be eliminated. In thinking of prospective officers, consider their characters and patriotism, also their firm belief in law-enforcement of all kinds.

There is no room in any city, state or country for a knocker. Be a booster and help those around you. A knocker is a nuisance to himself and those with whom he comes in contact.

Trade at home, if you keep your dollars here they will do double duty. Remember that your home merchant must live as well as yourself. He is not a necessary evil or convenience either. He is earning his living the same as all of the rest of earth's mortals and has evidenced his faith in you and your city by investing his capital here and therefore deserves your support in times of prosperity as well as in times of depression and trouble. Trade at HOME.

In a period when every sign points to prosperity; when the needs of the world and its purchasing power are at their peak—for despite the waste of the war, the actual wealth of the world is greater today than ever before in its history, it is time for the men in the business trenches and their generals to begin a steady and systematic campaign to take advantage of conditions which are ripe for a great business offensive.

When
My Dreams Come True
James Whitcomb Riley

WHEN my dreams come true—
when my dreams come true—
Shall I lean from out my casement, in the starlight and the dew,
To listen—smile and listen to the tinkle of the strings
Of the sweet guitar my lover's fingers
fondle, as he sings?
And as the nude moon slowly, slowly
shoulders into view,
Shall I vanish from his vision—
when my dreams come true?

WHEN my dreams come true—
shall the simple gown I wear
Be changed to softest satin, and my maiden-braided hair
Beraveled into flossy mists of rarest, fairest gold,
To be minted into kisses, more than any heart can hold?—
Or "the summer of my tresses" shall my lover liken to
"The fervor of his passion"—when my dreams come true?

THE UPPERMOST QUESTION "WHERE SHALL WE GO?"

Where shall we go this week?
That's a common query in the family of the California motorist. The state has such a wide variety of attractive tours to offer that it is sometimes difficult to decide on an itinerary, and often interesting routes that are easy of access, are overlooked.

Here's a "bird's eye" survey of the touring opportunities available for bay city motorists as vacation excursions or week-end jaunts, together with complete road information, prepared by the Touring Bureau of the National Automobile Club.

Yosemite—All roads open and in good condition.

Mt. Lassen—Enter from Red Bluff, either via Mineral or Manzanita
Lake. Roads excellent.

Lake Tahoe—Both roads open and fair. Advisable to go via Auburn and return via Placerville.

Sequoia—Roads in excellent condition. Go via Kaweah.

Mission Trail—In excellent condition entire distance.

Crater Lake—Roads not open until July 1.

Mt. Whitney—Owens River country roads open and good. Pack horses to Mt. Whitney.

San Diego Mountains—All roads
open and in good condition.

101-Mile Rim of the World Drive—
Roads good. Very mountainous.

Redwood Highway—Excellent condition Sausalito to Grants' Pass, Oregon, except short stretch near Oregon line.

Northwestern California—Roads to Alturas, thence to Klamath Falls,
Oregon, open and good.

Trinity County—Good mountain roads, excellent fishing.

Lake County—Excellent via Redwood Highway to Ukiah, Blue Lake,
Clear Lake, Lakeport, fair dirt over
Cobb Mountain and Middletown.
Paved to San Francisco.

Bret Harle Country—Good roads and very beautiful at this time of

She went to the little wash room at the rear, felt better immediately she had washed vigorously, combed her hair. She returned to the wagon to find a panic-stricken Dirk sure of nothing but that he had been deserted by his mother. Fifteen minutes later the two were seated at a table on which was spread what Chris Spannoel considered an adequate breakfast. A heartening enough beginning for the day, and a deceptive.

The Haymarket buyers did not want to purchase its vegetables from Selina DeJong. It wasn't used to buying of women, but to selling to them.

Selina had taken the covers off her vegetables. They were revealed crisp, fresh, colorful. But Selina knew they must be sold now, quickly. When the leaves began to wilt, when the edges of the cauliflower heads curled ever so slightly, turned brown and limp, their value decreased by half, even though the heads themselves remained white and firm.

Down the street came the buyers—little black-eyed swarthy men; plump, short-sleeved, greasy men; shrewd, tobacco-chewing men in overalls. Stolid red Dutch faces, sunburned. Lean, dark foreign faces. Shouting, clatter, turmoil.

The day broke warm. The sun rose red. It would be a humid September day such as frequently came in the autumn to this lake region. Garden stuff would have to move quickly this morning. Afternoon would find it worthless.

The peddlers looked at her bunched bouquets, glanced at her, passed her by. It was not unkindness that prompted them, but a certain shyness, a fear of the unaccustomed. Her wares were tempting but they passed her by with the instinct that the ignorant have against that which is unusual.

By nine o'clock trading began to fall off. In a panic Selina realized that the sales she had made amounted to little more than two dollars. If she stayed there until noon she might double that, but no more. In desperation she harnessed the horses, threaded her way out of the swarming street, and made for South Water street farther east. Here were the commission houses. She knew that Pervus had sometimes left his entire load with an established dealer here, to be sold on commission. She remembered the name—Talcott—though she did not know the exact location.

The boy had been almost incredibly patient and good. At the wagon he had stood sturdily next his mother, had busied himself vastly assisting her in her few pitiful sales; had plucked wilted leaves, brought forward the freshest and crispest vegetables. But now she saw that he was drooping a little as were her wares, with the heat and the absence from accustomed soil.

"Where we going now, mom?"

"To another street, Sobig—"

"Dirk!"

"—Dirk, where there's a man who'll buy all our stuff at once—maybe. Won't that be fine! Then we'll go home. You help mother find his name over the store. Talcott—T-a-l-c-o-double t."

William Talcott had known Pervus, and Pervus' father before him, and had adjudged them honest, admirable men. But of their garden truck he had small opinion.

In his doorway, he eyed the spare little figure that appeared before him all in rusty black, with his strained anxious face, its great deep-sunk eyes.

"DeJong, eh? Sorry to hear about your loss, ma'am. Pervus was a fine lad. No great shakes at truck farming, though. His widow, h'm? H'm. Here, he saw, was no dull-witted farm woman; no stolid Dutch woman truckster. He went out to her wagon, tweaked the boy's brown cheek. "Wa-al now, Mis' DeJong, you got a right smart lot of garden stuff here and it looks pretty good. Yessir, pretty good. But you're too late. Ten, pret' near."

"Oh, no!" cried Selina. "Oh, no! Not too late!" And at the agony in her voice he looked at her sharply.

"Tell you what, mebbe I can move half of 'em along for you. But stuff don't keep this weather. Turns wilty and my trade won't touch it. . . . First trip in?"

She wiped her face that was damp and yet cold to the touch. "First—trip in?" Suddenly she was finding it absurdly hard to breathe.

He called from the sidewalk to the men within: "George! Ben! Hustle this stuff in. Half of it. The best. Send you check tomorrow, Mis' DeJong."

One hand on the seat she prepared to climb up again—did step to the hub. You saw her shabby, absurd side boots that were so much too big for the slim little feet. "If you're just buying my stuff because you're sorry for me—" The Peake pride.

"Don't do business that way. Can't afford to, ma'am. My da'ter she's studying to be a singer. In Italy now, Carline is, and costs like all get-out. Takes all the money I can scrape together, just about."

There was a little color in Selina's face now. "Italy! Oh, Mr. Talcott!" You'd have thought she had seen it, from her face. She began to thank him, gravely.

"Now, that's all right, Mis' DeJong. I notice your stuff's bunched kind of extra, and all of a size. Fixin' to do that way right along?"

"Yes. I thought—they looked prettier that way—of course vegetables aren't supposed to look pretty, I expect—" she stammered, stopped.

"You fix 'em pretty like that and bring 'em in to me first thing, or send 'em. My trade, they like their stuff kind of special. Yessir."

As Selina gathered up the reins he stood again in his doorway, cool, remote, unlighted cigar in his mouth, while hand-trucks rattled past him, barrels and boxes thumped to the sidewalk in front of him, wheels and hoofs and shouts made a great clamor all about him.

"We going home now?" demanded Dirk. "We going home now? I'm hungry."

"Yes, lamb." Two dollars in her pocket. All yesterday's grim toil, and all today's, and months of labor behind those two days. Two dollars in the pocket of her black calico petticoat. "We'll get something to eat when we drive out a ways. Some milk and bread and cheese."

The sun was very hot. She took the boy's hat off, passed her tender work-calloused hand over the damp hair that clung to his forehead.

She made up her mind to drive east and then south. Pervus had sometimes achieved a late sale to outlying grocers. Jan's face if she came home with half the load still on the wagon! And what of the unpaid bills? She had, perhaps, thirty dollars, all told. She owed four hundred. More than that.

Fear shook her. She told herself she was tired, nervous. That terrible week. And now this. The heat. Soon they'd be home, she and Dirk. The comfort of it, the peace of it. Safe, desirable, suddenly dear. No work for a woman, this! Well, perhaps they were right.

Down Wabash avenue, with the L trains thundering overhead and her horses, frightened and uneasy with the unaccustomed roar and clangor of traffic. It was terribly hot.

As She Gathered Up the Reins He Stood in Her Doorway, Cool, Remote.

The boy's eyes popped with excitement and bewilderment.

"Pretty soon," Selina said. The muscles showed white beneath the skin of her jaw. "Pretty soon. Prairie avenue. Great big houses and lawns, all quiet." She even managed a smile. "I like it better home."

Prairie avenue at last, turning in at Sixteenth street. It was like calm after a storm. Selina felt battered, spent.

Then another thought came to her. Her vegetables, canvas covered, were fresher than those in the near-by markets. Why not try to sell some of them here, in these big houses? In an hour she might earn a few dollars this way at retail prices slightly less than those asked by the grocers of the neighborhood.

Agilely she stepped down the wheel, gave the reins to Dirk. She filled a large market basket with the finest and freshest of her stock and with this on her arm looked up a moment at the house in front of which she had stopped. The kitchen entrance, she knew, was by way of the alley at the back, but this she would not take. Across the sidewalk, down a little flight of stone steps, into the vestibule under the porch. She looked at the bell—a brass knob. "Pull it!" said the desperate Selina. "I can't! I can't!"

cried all the prim dim Vermont Peakes, in chorus. "All right. Starve to death and let them take the farm and Dirk, then."

At that she pulled the knob hard. Jangle went the bell in the hall. Again.

Footsteps up the hall. The door opened to disclose a large woman, high cheek-boned, in a work apron; a cook, apparently.

"Good morning," said Selina. "Would you like some fresh country vegetables?"

"No." She half shut the door, opening it again to ask, "Got any fresh eggs or butter?" At Selina's negative she closed the door, bolted it. Well, that was all right. Nothing so terrible about that, Selina told herself. Simply hadn't wanted any vegetables. The next house, and the next, and the next. Up one side of the street, and down the other. Four times she refilled her basket. At one house she sold a quarter's worth. Fifteen at another. Twenty cents here. Almost fifty there.

Twenty-first street—Twenty-fifth—Twenty-eighth. She had over four dollars in her purse. Dirk was weary now and hungry to the point of tears. "The last house," Selina promised him, "the very last one. After this one we'll go home."

The last house. She had almost five dollars, earned in the last hour. "Just five minutes," she said to Dirk, trying to make her tone bright, her voice gay. Her arms full of vegetables which she was about to place in the basket at her feet she heard at her elbow:

"Now, then, where's your license?"

She turned. A policeman at her side.

"License?"

"Yeh, you heard me. License. Where's your peddler's license? You got one, I s'pose."

"Why, no, no." She stared at him, still.

"Well, say, where d'ye think you are, peddlin' without a license! A good mind to run you in. Get along out of here, you and the kid. Leave me ketch you around here again!"

"What's the trouble, officer?" said a woman's voice. A smart open carriage of the type known as a victoria, with two chestnut horses whose harness shone with metal. "What's the trouble, Reilly?" The woman stepped out of the victoria.

"Woman peddling without a license. Mrs. Arnold. You got to watch 'em like a hawk. . . . Get along wid you, then." He put a hand on Selina's shoulder and gave her a gentle push.

There shook Selina from head to foot such a passion, such a storm of outraged sensibilities, as to cause street, victoria, silk-clad woman, horses, and policeman to swim and shiver in a haze before her eyes. The rage of a fastidious woman who had had an alien male hand put upon her. Her face was white. Her eyes glowed black, enormous. She seemed tall, majestic even.

"Take your hand off me!" Her speech was clipped, vibrant. "How dare you touch me! How dare you! Take your hand!" The blazing eyes in the white mask. He took his hand from her shoulder. The red surged into her face. A tanned weather-beaten toll-worn woman, her abundant hair skewered into a knob and held by a long gray-black hairpin, her full skirt grimed with the mud of the wagon wheel, a pair of old side boots on her slim feet, a grotesquely battered old felt hat (her husband's) on her head, her arms full of ears of sweet corn, and carrots, and radishes and bunches of beets; a woman with bad teeth, flat breasts—even then Julie had known her by her eyes. And she had stared and then run to her in her silk dress and her plumed hat, crying, "Oh, Selina! My dear! My dear!" with a sob of horror and pity. "My dear!" And had taken Selina, carrots, beets, corn, and radishes in her arms. The vegetables lay scattered all about them on the sidewalk in front of Julie Hempel Arnold's great stone house on Prairie avenue. But strangely enough it had been Selina who had done the comforting, patting Julie's plump silken shoulder and saying, over and over, soothingly, as to a child, "There, there! It's all right, Julie. It's all right. Don't cry. What's there to cry for! Sh-sh! It's all right."

Selina's domain he surveyed with a keen and comprehensive eye.

"You want to sell?"

"No."

"That's good. Few years from now this land will be worth money." He had spent a bare fifteen minutes taking shrewd valuation of the property from fields to barn, from barn to house. "Well, what do you want to do, heh, Selina?"

They were seated in the cool and unexpectedly pleasing little parlor, with its old Dutch luster set gleaming softly in the cabinet, its three rows of books, its air of comfort and usage.

Selina clasped her hands tightly in her lap—those hands that, from much grubbing in the soil, had taken on something of the look of the gnarled things they tended. The nails were short, discolored, broken. The palms rough, calloused. The whole story of the last twelve years of Selina's life was written in her two hands.

Chapter IX

The best thing for Dirk. It was the phrase that repeated itself over and over in Selina's speech during the days that followed. In this period of bewilderment and fatigue Julie had attempted to take charge of Selina much as she had done a dozen years before at the time of Simeon Peake's dramatic death. And now, as then, she pressed into service her wonder-working father and bounden slave, August Hempel.

"Pa'll be out tomorrow and I'll probably come with him. I've got a committee meeting, but I can easily—"

"You said—did you say your father would be out tomorrow? Out where?"

"To your place, Farm."

"But why should he? It's a little twenty-five-acre truck farm, and half of it under water a good deal of the time."

"Pa'll find a use for it, never fear. He won't say much, but he'll think of things. And then everything will be all right."

A species of ugly pride now possessed Selina. "I don't need help. Really I don't, Julie, dear. It's never been like today. Never before. We were getting on very well, Pervus and I. Then after Pervus' death so suddenly like that I was frightened. Terribly frightened. About Dirk. I wanted him to have everything. Beautiful things. I wanted his life to be beautiful. Life can be so ugly, Julie. You don't know. You don't know."

"Well, now, that's why I say. We'll be out tomorrow, pa and I. Dirk's going to have everything beautiful. We'll see to that."

It was then that Selina had said, "But that's just it. I want to do it myself, for him. I can. I want to give him all these things myself."

"But that's selfish."

"I don't mean to be. I just want to do the best thing for Dirk."

It was shortly after noon that High Prairie, hearing the unaccustomed chug of a motor, rushed to his windows or porches to behold Selina DeJong in her mashed black felt hat and Dirk waving his battered straw wildly, riding up the Haisted road toward the DeJong farm in a bright red automobile that had shattered the nerves of every farmer's team it had met on the way. Of the DeJong team and the DeJong dog Pom, and the DeJong vegetable wagon there was absolutely no sign. High Prairie was rendered unfit for work throughout the next twenty-four hours.

In the twelve years' transition from butcher to packer Aug Hempel had taken on a certain authority and distinction. Now, at fifty-five, his hair was gray, relieving the too-ruddy color of his face. In the last few years he had grown very deaf in one ear, so that when you spoke to him he looked at you intently. This had given him a reputation for keenness and great character insight, when it was merely the protective trick of a man who does not want to confess that he is hard of hearing.

Selina's domain he surveyed with a keen and comprehensive eye.

"You want to sell?"

"No."

"That's good. Few years from now this land will be worth money." He had spent a bare fifteen minutes taking shrewd valuation of the property from fields to barn, from barn to house. "Well, what do you want to do, heh, Selina?"

They were seated in the cool and unexpectedly pleasing little parlor, with its old Dutch luster set gleaming softly in the cabinet, its three rows of books, its air of comfort and usage.

The nails were short, discolored, broken. The palms rough, calloused. The whole story of the last twelve years of Selina's life was written in her two hands.

Discovered

A young man whose gallantry was in excess of his pecuniary means sought to remedy the defect and to save the money required for the purpose of expensive flowers by arranging with a gardener to let him have a bouquet from time to time in return for his cast-off clothes.

One day he received a bunch of roses which he at once dispatched to his lady love.

In sure anticipation of a friendly welcome he called at the girl's house the same evening and was not a little surprised at a frosty reception.

After a pause the girl remarked, frigidly: "You sent me a note today."

"A note! To be sure, I sent you flowers; but—"

"And this note was with the bouquet. Do you mean to deny it?"

And the young man read: "Don't forget the old trousers you promised me the other day."

Work and don't worry if you would be happy. Otherwise worry and don't work.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Peat as Fertilizer

According to the geological and economic survey of North Carolina, large supplies of fertilizer can be obtained from deposits in other parts of the country. It is said exhausted farm lands can be reclaimed by these peat deposits, which are one of our few domestic sources of nitrogen that may be applied economically.

Ship Without a Rivet

An oil tanker in one piece, without a rivet in its hull plates or a bolt in its steel frame, the first one ever built in the United States by the electric welding method, was launched recently in Providence, R. As It Seemed to Him

An old New York farmer attended a big picnic at Birmingham and stayed over to watch the dancing at night, says Town Topics. He hadn't been out in the world much, and he was deeply impressed with the girls' clothes at that dance.

"Some of the ladies' clothes I see here," he said, "plumb puts me in mind of a barbed wire fence."

Somebody asked him why. "Well," said he, "it's this way—they appear to protect the property without obstructin' the view."

Bum Dresser

"The New Yorker is the worst-dressed man in the world," said P. Chatfield Hobart, the San Francisco millionaire bibliophile. "He spends the most money on his clothes, too."

"But he wears them all wrong. He wears a plaid lounge suit where he ought to wear a black morning coat. He wears in Fifth avenue bay tags that are only suitable for country house or yacht."

"In fact," Mr. Hobart ended, "the New Yorker would put on an aviator's rig if he was going down to work in a coal mine."

SMILES COME FROM THE HEART

FIFTH OF A SERIES OF SIX ARTICLES

By Ruth Malcomson
New-Crowned
"Miss America"

"A SMILE is the only beauty doctor that makes good!"

That was the most impressive remark, and the truest, in a talk I once heard given by a famous humorist. Smiling is one "beauty stunt" I will unreservedly recommend; in fact I will guarantee it to make the prettiest face prettier, and to lend at least a little charm to the homeliest!

But—can you smile? I don't mean an automatic barring of the teeth, a pulling back of the lips by tightening the muscles around the mouth. That's not a smile—it's more likely to be a grimace. No, a real, sure 'nuff smile can't be forced; it comes from the heart.

But, you ask, how can a girl smile a spontaneous, radiant, from-the-heart smile if she has a painful corn on her foot, or if she is over tired and frantic for sleep; or if tea, cocktails, cigarettes or coffee have put her nerves on edge.

The answer is, of course, that she can't. The sort of smile that will make the world smile with you is to be seen only on the face of the girl who's in tune with the world—physically, mentally, spiritually. She must, in other words, be well-poised.

First of all, there is a sort of spiritual poise which is usually reflected in a happy, smiling face. And although it may seem queer to connect up religion with beauty, I sincerely believe that no girl can be beautiful unless she is happy; and how can she be happy unless she also is good? More materially, one of the best producers of mental and physical poise is daily bathing. The daily bath keeps the body supple and young so

Go Hatless Now and Then, So Sun Has a Chance at Your Hair

Miss Malcomson at Atlantic City as the Winning Beauty

Keystone View Co.

that the muscles do not become stiff and their movements awkward. That means physical poise. It relaxes the nerves and promotes serenity of thought. That means mental poise. Another important poise-producer not often thought of as such is daintiness in dress. No girl can help being self-conscious and ill at ease if her blouse is soiled, her "nude" stockings stained at ankle and heel, her finger nails uncared for, or her hair unbrushed.

Remember—"the girl worth while is the one who can smile when everything goes dead wrong."

WORK RENEWED ON BIG LAKE FORDYCE PROJECT

Engineers of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company have just returned from a road-opening expedition into the Lake Fordyce Country, nine miles northeast of Cisco. A crew of men is now at work clearing the road of snow and making preliminary arrangements for the resumption of work on the big project which was started last year. The Fordyce Dam which was originally built in 1873 for the impounding of water which was used in hydraulic mining has been raised three times. Pacific Gas and Electric Company, last year started to add forty-seven feet to its height. This will bring the dam up to a total height of one-hundred sixteen feet. The additional forty-seven feet will more than double the storage capacity of the Lake, which is now 25,600 acre feet. "With the previous additions thereto were constructed all the work was done by hand, and without the aid of modern machinery," states O. W. Peterson, Engineer in charge. He further states, "that the present force will be built up to a crew of four hundred men and whenever possible three shifts will be operated. The work involves the moving of more than two thousand yards of rock per day or more than enough to pave one mile of ordinary highway.

Two hundred fifty acres of land will be cleared of trees and brush in the area which will be flooded by the rise in the level of the Lake. The Lake is fed by a watershed of over twenty-one square miles. The additional water stored will be used to increase the generating capacity of the Spaulding-Drum Power Houses. After passing through the Power

The project will involve an expenditure of one and one-half million dollars and is under the direction of Jim Martin, who superintended the building of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company's big Pit No. 1 Power Plant in Shasta County. The present plans call for the completion of the work prior to the setting in of this year's winter storms.

MOTOR TRIPS ABROAD The Most Famous Triumphal Arch ONE OF A SERIES OF TRAVEL TALKS

It is beneath this arch that France buried the body of her Unknown Soldier

NEXT to the Eiffel Tower the famous Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile in Paris is best known to those who have never had the good fortune to visit the wonder city of France. This is the largest triumphal arch in existence and was begun by Napoleon I in memory of his victories in 1805-6, and completed by Louis Philippe in 1836. The arch itself is 96 feet high and 48 feet wide. The structure as a whole is 162 feet high. The picture above was taken on the Champs-Elysees, showing the famous trees on either side.

Vast Fortunes Theirs for Few Brief Hours

"I was a millionaire on paper for a brief few hours," said a clerk in a leading brokerage house and he added, "as a matter of fact I did not know I had been a millionaire until the chief bookkeeper shoved a paper under my nose and commanded me to sign on the dotted line. I then observed that I had held 75,000 shares of leading industrial stock overnight, the certificate being in my name, and that I was about to sign away nearly $3,000,000. The thrill was brief."

In many brokerage houses everybody from the office boy up temporarily has much wealth in his or her name. Some years ago a certain house had put ten thousand shares of a Standard Oil stock in a clerk's name. When the stock clerk came with the customary waiver for the erstwhile shareholder to sign, he was home on Long Island, sick.

A hurry call revealed he was dangerously ill and in no condition to sign anything and would not be for some while; in fact, the doctor said, "I hope we can save him."

He came around and signed the paper some weeks later, but he had actually been the possessor of $850,000 of stock for that time and if he had died, the firm would have had to go through some legal gestures to unravel the red tape around an undorsed certificate.—Wall Street Journal.

Classification of Teas

Teas are classed as green and black, according to color, flavor and mode of preparation. The leaves for green tea are heated or roasted slightly in shallow pans over a wood fire almost as soon as gathered, after which they are rolled with the hands upon a table to decrease the moisture and to twist them. They are again roasted and quickly dried. The leaves for black tea are spread out in the open air for some time and then tossed with the hands until flaccid, roasted a few hours in a soft and moist state. They are finally dried over a charcoal fire. The operation of rolling and constant is sometimes repeated several times until the leaves have become the proper color.

Touch of Deilement

Sophronius had a fair daughter named Eulalia and she asked his permission one day to visit the gay Luchida. "I cannot allow it," said the Greek father. "Then you must think me exceedingly weak," said the daughter indignantly. Sophronius picked up a dead coal from the hearth and handed it to his daughter, but she hesitated to accept it. "Take it, my child, it will not burn you." Eulalia obeyed, and the milky whiteness of her hand was instantly gone. "Father, we cannot be too careful in handling coals," said the vexed daughter. "No," said the father solemnly, "for even when they do not burn they blacken." So it is with evil companions and communications.

Exist on Porcupine

Four men, wrecked on the north side of the Kenai peninsula in northern Alaska, lived entirely on porcupines until they were picked up by a boat a month later. This diet agreed with them so well that they were in fine physical condition when rescued. The porcupine is one of the easiest of wild creatures to kill, for it cannot run fast and succumbs quickly to a blow from a stick. Time and time again prospectors whose provisions have become exhausted in the wilds have been saved from starvation by the flesh of these animals. An unwritten law of the North is that a porcupine must not be killed except for food.

City May Have Been Myth

The ancient city of Troy is supposed to have occupied a slight elevation near the foot of Mount Ida, in Mysia, and nearly surrounded by the River Scamander, but its location is in dispute and some even doubt that it ever existed. The founding of the kingdom is ascribed to Teucer, whose grandson was Troas, who was the father of Ilius, who called the city Ilium after himself and also Troja after Troas, his father. The classic poets say that the walls of the city were built by the magic sound of Apollo's lyre. The date of the taking of the city after a ten-year siege is usually placed at 1184 B. C.

S. F. to Welcome Visiting Shriners

Islam Temple of the Mystic Shrine is all ready to receive the 50,000 happy-go-lucky wearers of the fez who will stop off in San Francisco on their way home from the Imperial Council session which is being held in Los Angeles this week.

Arrayed in Oriental splendor, the city is waiting patiently to greet these Nobles of the Mystic Shrine who will pitch their tents within the gates of St. Francis and this their playground.

Already the city is in jubilant mood and buoyant spirits—business cares are forgotten. The entire downtown business district has been decorated in Shrine colors, and nothing will be left undone by George A. Zimmerman and Wilber Jackson, chairmen of the Committee of Fifty, in charge of the gala event, for the success of the festivities which began at dawn yesterday, when the first caravan of pilgrims arrive from the convention city on the journey home.

Medinah Temple from Chicago, will send the largest delegation to San Francisco. More than 3000 pilgrims on their way home will route their caravan via San Francisco. They will arrive Friday afternoon, escorted by Islam's uniformed organization and Potentate Hugh K. McKevitt of Islam Temple.

This temple, boasting a membership of more than 25,000 Nobles will bring all its uniform organizations along.

For all of the visiting Nobles, Islam has a greeting, a buffet luncheon at all hours of the day and dancing with hundreds of pretty girls. There will be automobile rides, golf tournaments, boat rides on the bay, sight-seeing tours through Chinatown and almost anything else one can ask for. Two orchestras will be going day and night for the dancers. Visiting Shrine bands will give concerts twice daily in Union Square where a grandstand has been erected. Chanters from the visiting Temples will sing in the various churches.

TEETH TALKS BY DR. CASTLE

The following is a summary of the articles written by Dr. Castle which have been running in the Recorder for the past few weeks:

The prospective mother should get her physician to give her a proper dietary list. The child should be fed properly.

At two years the teeth should be examined and all defects remedied. A child should never know tooth ache.

At six years of age the permanent teeth commence coming. First correct any imperfection before the damage is done, never let a tooth come to the aching stage.

A devitalized tooth is a dead tooth. That is, the dentine in the center is dead, caused around by living tissue. Give it time and the dead part will extend to the surface.

Pyrothemia is a symptom of either wrong food, drugs, disease or bad habits.

There is no cure for a pus pocket, except removal of the pocket. To do this the removal of the tooth is usually the only sure way.

All pus pockets are feeders of poisons into the system, which sooner or later breaks down.

In fact the old proverb, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, is the proper advice to give in case you can find a dentist whom you can trust.

Mrs. H. M. Laffin, president of the Redwood City Woman's Club and Mrs. Jay T. Cooper, president of the Menlo Park Study Club attended a luncheon at the home of Mrs. S. C. Peck, president of San Mateo County Federation of Women's Clubs at South San Francisco Friday afternoon. Mrs. Peck entertained all of the club presidents of the county and sought their advice in planning work for the new year.

Menlo Parlor, Native Daughters of Golden West are to be hostesses at another of their delightful dances on Saturday evening, June 13 in Duff & Doyle hall here. Good music will make the hours pass rapidly and the public is cordially invited.

Made Use of Physical Deformity for Profit

There is at Ripon, in Yorkshire, England, an old hostelry, the Unicorn, at which is preserved an etching of a character who once was "boots" there.

"Old Boots," as he was familiarly known to many who never knew him by any other title, flourished from about the middle of the Eighteenth century, and now lies somewhere in the yard of Ripon minster. He was endowed by nature with a nose and chin so inordinately long and so tending to embrace each other that at length he acquired the power of holding a piece of money between them. Thus he was able to turn his deformity to commercial account.

It was a part of his duty to wait upon travelers arriving at the inn, to assist them in removing their boots; and he usually introduced himself carrying a pair of slippers in one hand and a bootjack in the other, and we are told that the company generally were so diverted by his appearance that frequently they would give him a piece of money on condition that he held it between his nose and chin.

Other times, other tastes, and it seems hardly possible that modern travelers would lend themselves to such an exhibition.

That Was the Trouble

A stranger on the main street of Hornsleville, Ariz., came upon a battered individual with both eyes blackened and face swollen with bruises, lying in a heap against the curb at the principal corner.

"What happened to you?" asked the stranger with some agitation.

"A feller beat me up," was the reply, "for not payin' a bill."

"Why don't you send for a doctor?" "The doctor was here about a minute ago, pardner."

"Oh, you're all right, then?"

"Why, pardner," said the wounded citizen, "it was the doctor's bill I didn't pay."—Hygeia.

Beech for Fuel

Beeches are beautiful throughout the year. From the ground to their polished slender twigs the gray to brown bark is clean and smooth, and both bark and twigs are so distinctive that they are not to be confused with other trees of the forest. These trees are famed not only for their beauty but for their many useful products as well, says "Tree Habits" by the American Nature association. Their wood is valuable for lumber and is made into floorings, furniture, tool handles, brush backs and kitchen utensils. As fuel it has no superior.
